

Greetings, patient #22...
I see you've awoken, how was your sleep?

I see... don't feel rushed by me, alright. You don't have to talk.

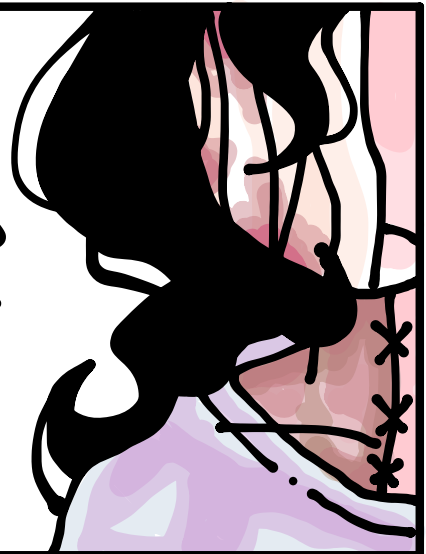

I want you to take your time, adjust. I understand if you're tired and confused since you've only just woken up from a coma. It's also highly likely that you suffer from amnesia because of your brain trauma, which might leave your speech impaired as well.

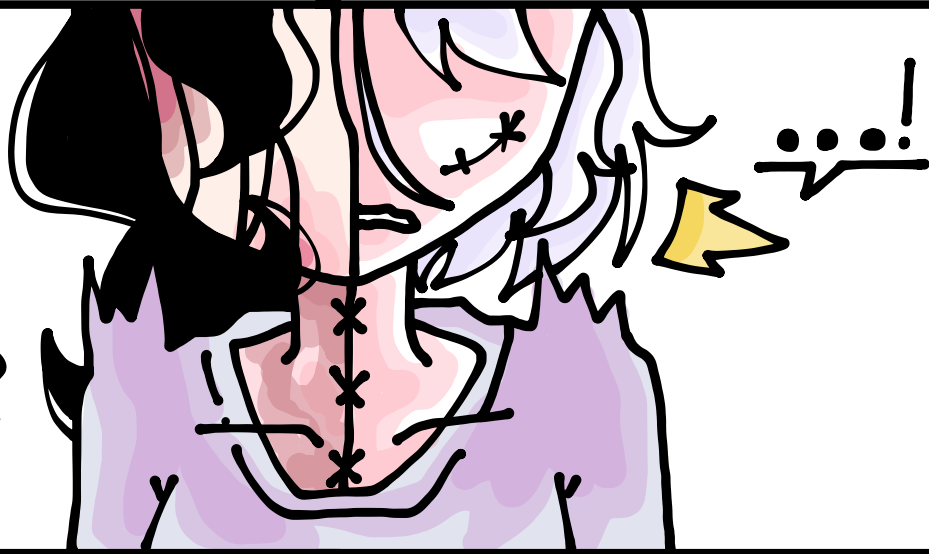

Again, I understand if you aren't taking this well, it must've been traumatic.

Oh my apologies, you really have forgotten... haven't you? It's alright, I'll freshen up your memories...

Do you remember
Liam's Circus
by any chance?

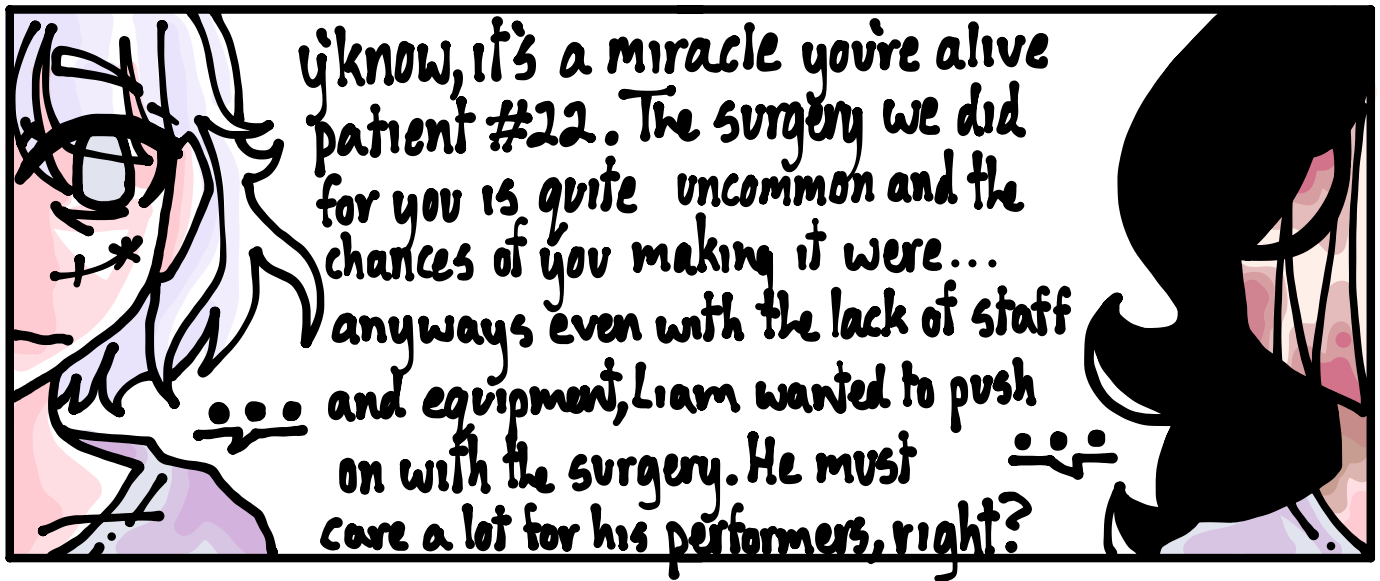

There was an incident a while ago,
a terrible fire... it was enough for the place to shut down but thankfully it reopened. Are your memories coming back? Good...

This incident is why you're here, it left you half blind, immobile, weak, half burnt and half broken. You can't talk now but I can tell that you're wondering if you'll heal.
Don't worry you will, not now though.

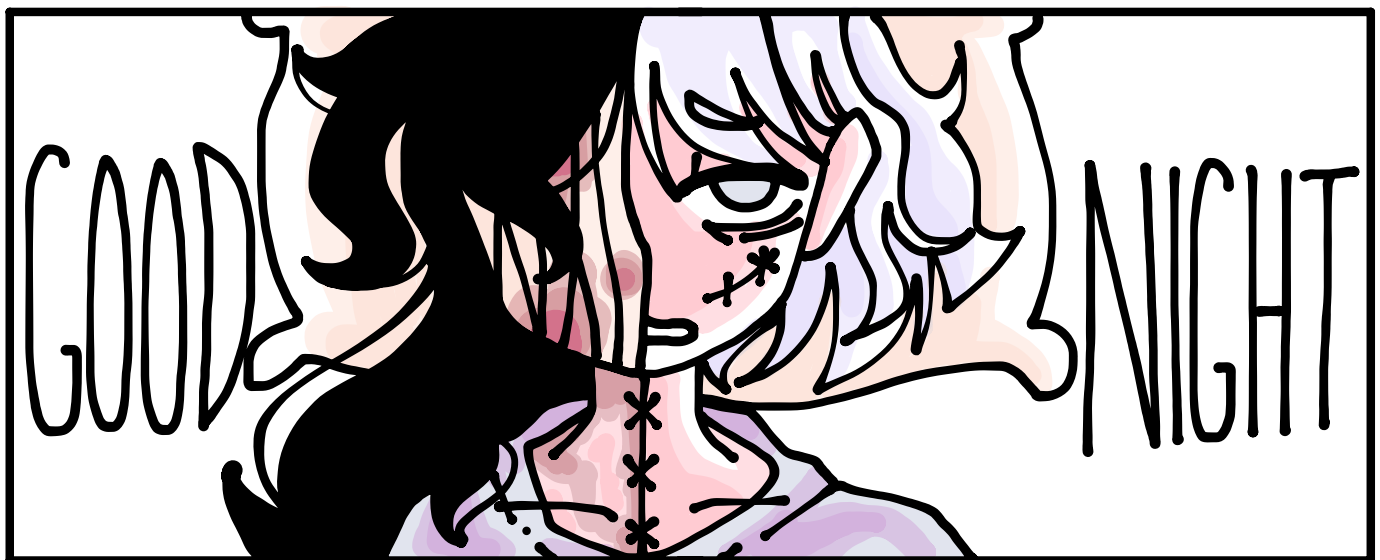

y'know, it's a miracle you're alive patient #22. The surgery we did for you is quite uncommon and the chances of you making it were... anyways even with the lack of staff and equipment, Liam wanted to push on with the surgery. He must care a lot for his performers, right?

Anyways, ill let you rest for now and well continue our talk tomorrow. Dont worry about anything, you'll start your rehab classes next month and will be good as new to perform for the circus, hah! It was good chatting with you, patient #22.

GOOD

NIGHT