

Rare weapons

A Marble Scythe.

It was created for practice.

The 53 inch/1.35m blade is very strong, has a perfectly sharp elegantly-shaped edge, and has complex engravings etched into it.

The teak (extremely heavy, strong, durable dark wood) handle is 73 inches/1.85m long and has an ivory grip.

It is heavy, is perfectly balanced and is uncomfortable to hold.

A Diamond Battle Axe.

It was created as a hunting tool.

The axe head has a semi-circle edge, and has delicate patterns etched across it.

The solid gold handle is 20 inches/51cm long and has an ivory grip.

It is heavy, is perfectly balanced and is comfortable to use for a long time.

A Topaz Halberd.

It was created for combat has an identical twin.

The axe blade has a wide, triangular edge, and has runes engraved on it. The top of the halberd is tipped with a pair of blades 13 inch/33cm long, and the back edge forms a small thin wedge. The entire head is securely bound to the shaft with a series of slots and teeth.

The cherry (moderately hard, easy to carve pale wood) shaft is 1.8m/5.9ft long and has a silk-bound grip.

It is light-weight, and is perfectly balanced.

A Marble-headed War Hammer.

It was created for combat is a unique weapon.

The large hammer head is a square pyramid, and has complex engravings inlaid in silver. The opposing end is a 9 inch/23cm long straight blade.

The walnut (strong, durable, versatile dark wood) handle is 14 inches/36cm long with an elaborate grip and a square pyramid-shaped pommel.

It is neither too light nor too heavy, and is perfectly balanced.

A Composite Bow.

It was created for intimidation.

The bow is made from excellent quality maple (hard and shock resistant pale wood) with sapphire grip, and has complex engravings inlaid in silver.

The simple string is made from vegetable fibers and was expertly crafted.

The arrows are made from the rarest pine (soft, light weight pale wood), each tipped with gold arrowhead and fletched with eagle feathers.

The quiver is made of bear fur with iron trimmings and a cream leather strap.

A Marble Flail.

It was created for sporting competitions.

The compact flail head is covered in very long spikes connected to the haft with a chain 3 inches/8cm long.

The 11 inches/28cm long maple (hard and shock resistant pale wood) haft is decorated with jewels.

The whole flail is exceptionally heavy, is perfectly balanced, and is to be used in the left hand.

A Topaz Double-headed Battle Axe.

It was created for intimidation.

The axe heads have a wide, star-shaped edge, and has mysterious engravings across it.

The pine (soft, light weight pale wood) handle is 8 inches/20cm long and has an elaborate grip.

It is very heavy, is perfectly balanced and can only be used effectively by a master.

An Emerald Sword.

It was created as a cultural artifact and is very old.

The blade is very effective, currently has a very sharp edge, and has mysterious engravings across it. It has an elaborate guard, a solid gold grip, and a pommel with a sigil set inside a disk. It is light-weight, is perfectly balanced and can be used easily by anyone. The scabbard is made of brass with silver trimmings.

A Ruby Longsword.

It was created for defence.

The blade has retained its shape well, currently has a perfectly sharp edge, and has an insignia engraved on one side. It has a guard shaped like a vine, an elaborate grip inlaid with gold, and a large cyan gem set in the pommel. It is light-weight, is perfectly balanced and is to be used in the right hand. The scabbard is made of steel with coloured glass trimmings.

A Gold Rapier.

It was created as a status symbol is over 1,000 years old, and is responsible for many deaths.

The blade has retained its shape well, currently has a permanently sharp edge, and has complex engravings inlaid in gold. It has a delicate guard, an elaborate grip inlaid with gold, and a diamond-shaped pommel. It is light-weight, is perfectly balanced and can only be used effectively by a master. The scabbard is made of steel with gold trimmings.

A Ruby Double Edged, Two-handed Sword.

It was created as a hunting tool.

The blade is strong, currently has an exceptionally sharp edge, and has runes engraved on it. It has a decorative guard, a polished ivory grip inlaid with gold, and an over-sized pommel. It is neither too light nor too heavy, is perfectly balanced and is uncomfortable to hold. The scabbard is made of red with topaz trimmings, and is covered by red rubber.