

So u don't need lots of people to like u, and yes people will not always like u but that is a part of life, I don't tolerate popular people because they think they are better than others she sounds like she has problems with dealing with break ups, but ur still young's you don't need lots of people to like u bc after high school it won't matter, there is nothing wrong with , don't let others actions get the better of u, popular people have lots of friends but most aren't real and non popular people have few to little people but they are real, but I'm in the same spot and know what is like, there is nothings wrong with the music u listen to or wearing black bc I do that all the time, but u could be going through a form of depression and u might need to look up healthy coping mechanisms