

Why do some people spend money on things like plushies and clothes and other stuff just because they like a certain fandom? Like blah blah blah blah blah hyperfixation blah blah blah blah blah 😐 bad money management blah blah blah blah blah

me: -$840

So basically solarballs is centred around sentient celestial bodies, that have always been conscious + fully autonomous since the beginning of time. We just didn't grasp that concept + deemed them senseless. At the near beginning of the solarballs universe, the world was hectic + unstable. Stars of immense sizes were born, causing them to die young and explode daily. Planets couldn't form, and those that did didn't survive long. But control soon came, and the universe stabilized. This was where our sun came in. He was born alone, confused, and terrified. Though he did soon meet four other stars, two of which had teased and mocked him when he was just a newborn. They all soon left when an older star had gone supernova, leaving the sun behind in the blast... blah blah blah