

After what seemed like hours we had finally reached the very edge of the city, a place so barren you'd be surprised to find a bustling town on the horizon. Slowly, we made our way past the fence and to the trapdoor from yesterday. I was in awe that we were totally alone in the woods. To far to see the trail we were once on. The emptiness was best about the trip and I was glad I got to share it with a friend.

Skip • Save • Load

“Why did you bring me here again [redacted]? Was it because you still wanted to explore that weird building some more?” She asked as she adjusted her scarf. I wanted to speak but I just couldn’t, words weren’t forming even though I opened my mouth. “You know you can tell me anything right? Just trust me, I won’t tell anybody anything!”. What should I do?

Skip • Save • Load

I knew that it was now or never, I had to do this no matter the cost. "I'm going to make this quick alright? Please forgive me for this..." I said with a grin on my face. "What are you talking about? Is something wro-" Before she could finish her sentence I whipped out my hand gun. I pulled the trigger and a loud ringing was heard before she could react. Mission Accomplished.

