

RANT AHEAD HEHEHE

I'm so happy rn. I had the best day yesterday. I had Faith Formation class. I knew a lot of the material, so I got a lot of questions right. It felt good. After that I went to Mass—for the SECOND TIME that day. I don't go to the 5 o'clock Mass very often. It was filled with teenagers vibing to praise and worship music. It was cool. I might go again. Then a bunch of us teens went to the Parish Center next door to test out games for the Halloween party and eat a ton of candy. And guess what? MY FORMER CRUSH WAS THERE. I was kinda freaking out because he's still amazing. I think I handled it well...ish. Also, we had a donut eating race where we divided into pairs and one person held the donut up on a string and the other tried to eat it without using their hands. I got so much donut on my face. The pics are going on Instagram (PLS DON'T LOOK FOR IT). We played Sardines too, which is a game in which one person hides and everyone else tries to find them. When they do, that person hides with them. The game ends when the last person finds the hider. Former Crush and me were some of the first to find the hider, and we were snort-laughing all together because he wouldn't stop coughing REALLY LOUDLY ON PURPOSE so that the others would find us faster. Funniest part of my day tbh. Overall it was the best time and I feel extremely happy and holy from the entire experience.

