

For a jester to be in love with a king, would be like a man to be in love with a god.

What is he to do? A jester, not worthy of the king's love, but, would it be an absurd thought to think, that maybe even if he is not worthy of the king's love, he may already have it? Even then it would be quite a gamble to tell the king such a thing. So one, especially the jester, could not confess such a foolish thought. So, a jester must watch the king from afar. And the king would have to watch a jester from afar.
