

I ran until I heard voices. They were taking a break and I did too. Then I heard screaming and a laugh. I saw Cypher and Knole running in fear and Evelyn ran at them with her dagger. I chuckled and started after them. The day was pretty and they made good progress by the time the sun set. I overheard them talking about going to mount Othrys. Smart. So that was the place. The first line of the prophecy was figured out. Good for them. I think and lay out my sleeping bag in the tree I had found. I used the customized straps to keep me from falling out in the night and listened to their conversations. What? So maybe it was invading privacy a little but an Aunt has the right to it right? Maybe not but I did anyway. A pulled out a tiny device Katie, my friend from the Hephaestus cabin, had made. It detected when monsters were 2 miles from the device. I turned it on and smiled as it turned on. I set it where it would wake me up if it found something. I went back to listening. It was hard to hear but Knole was talking to Cypher. Umm say your best friend had a thing for your sister... what then? Knole asked him. I smiled. Knole liked Evelyn. I could see it. Cypher was confused at first but reassured Knole that he was fine with Knole liking his sister. Knole voiced my thoughts. Satyr's aren't supposed to love demigods! Its unworthy and unholy. Its considered a sin! He said between sobs. I knew it was true no matter how wrong it was. I felt bad for Knole. He loved Evelyn but was scared what would happen if something happened. I thought more about it while they set up for the night. I made sure they fell asleep before I did. The tree wasn't very comfortable but it concealed me from them. I wished Dev was with me. I felt awful for leaving him alone like that. Maybe I was in the wrong for leaving. I think.
