You know what I hate, is when the people who are supposed to be friends hate each other and they all come to you to talk ████ about the other person, when they yap about all they're favorite characters or fandoms only to dismiss yours when you mention something you like, when you are forced into the position of the quiet listener who will always be there for you and listen to your egotistical, narcissistic, and hypocritical rants about the ones you supposedly care about, I'm tired cause at school they get along so well, but the second they're home they hop online and start talking ████ about your friends to you, Im done with the bs, y'all bicker and fight like toddlers the second someone likes something different, or chooses to express themselves to the ones they care about, Im probably going to quit notability because I'm tired of seeing your petty fights on here, you know who you are, I'm done.

I'm scared to show my emotions because of you guys